

GEORGE WASHINGTON HIGH SCHOOL
WATCHET

J A N U A R Y • J U N E

1943

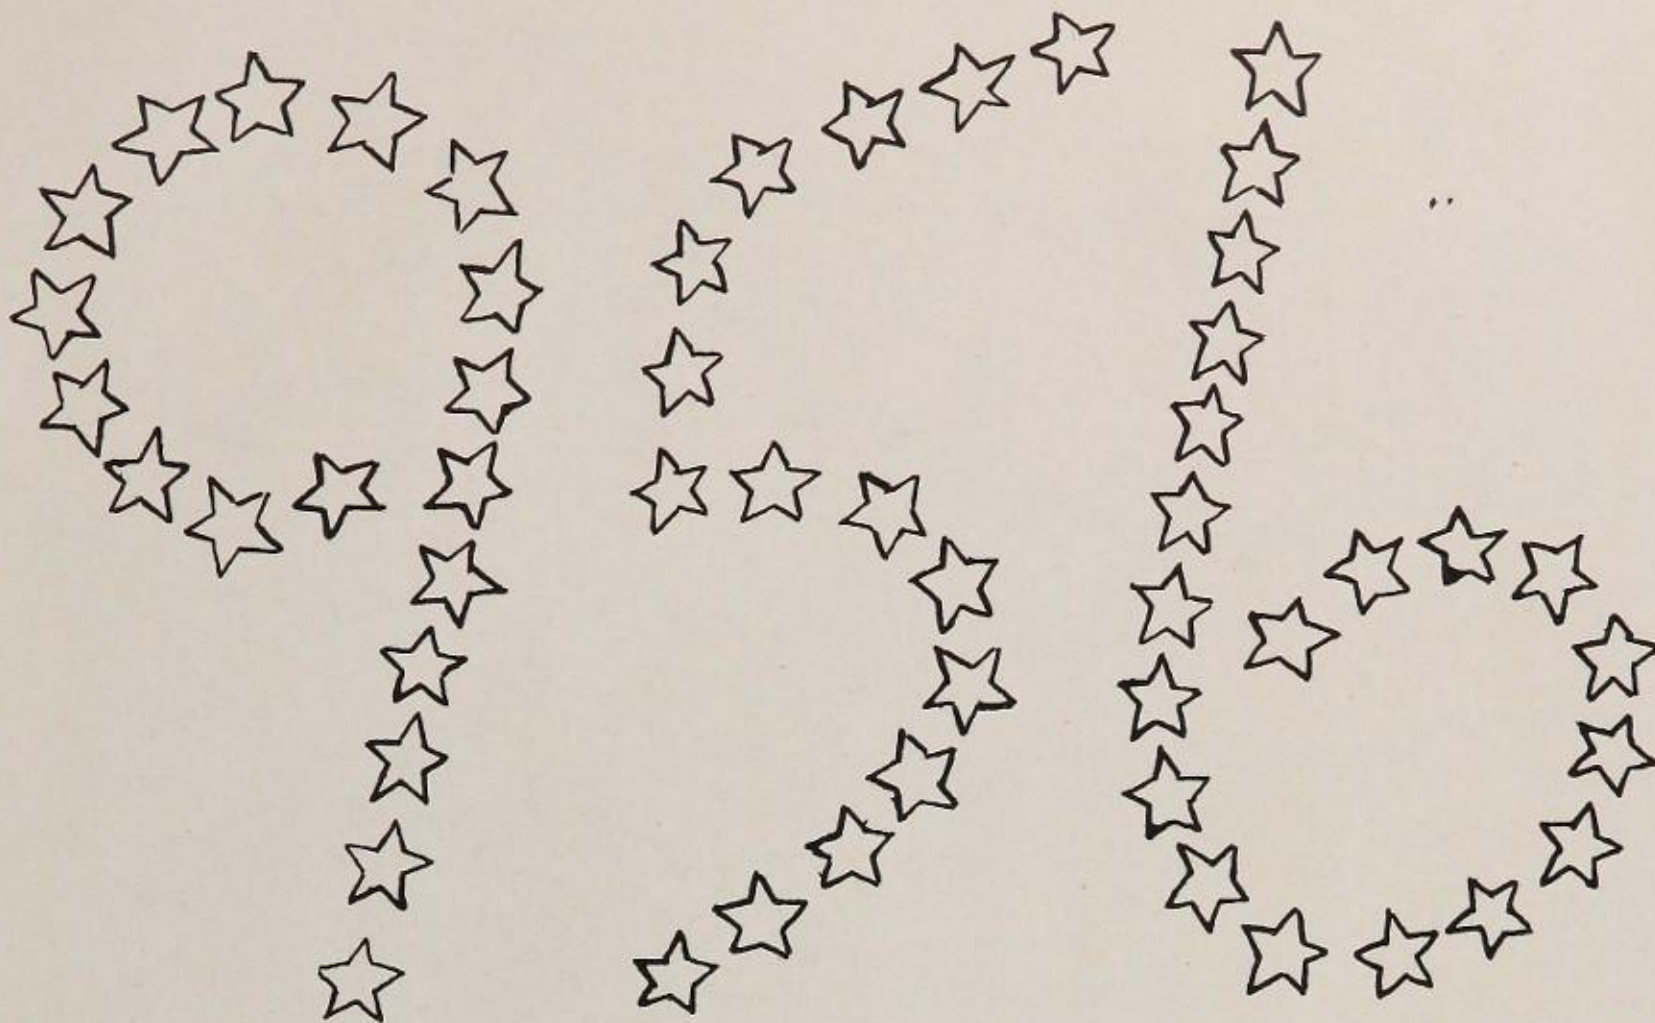

A black and white photograph of George Washington High School. The image shows a multi-story brick building with several windows, some of which are covered in ivy. In the foreground, there is a courtyard with a curved path and many students walking around. The photograph is partially obscured by the text 'GEORGE WASHINGTON HIGH SCHOOL' and 'WATCHET'.

ARTHUR A. BOYLAN, Principal

We, the graduates of '43, are entering a world ravaged by warfare, but we are prepared. Each of us is able to do what he or she undertakes, be it in military or civilian life. Many of us will soon join the ranks of the nine hundred fifty former graduates who have entered the service of our country. Of this number, fourteen have been lost in action and five cited for valorous service. The number is small in comparison to the country's vast armed might, but each one of our number carries something in his heart that his comrades are without.

That something is the spirit of George Washington—the hurrying breathlessly down the hall to get to the next period on time; the grand ovation that greets each broken dish in the lunchroom; cramming homework during the short official; the dread summons to the cutting office; the horrible anxiety over mid-terms—it is Senior Week in all its glory.

Verily, it is the hundreds of things that go into the making of George Washington High.

Our days in high school are over; they have passed far too quickly. Today as we look back upon ourselves, from the time we entered as bewildered freshmen—till the present when we are "worldly" seniors, we find there is a lump in our throats as we bid our school, "Adieu." Adieu, but not good-bye, for we shall never say good-bye to you George Washington. We shall take, each of us, a small part of you in our hearts. We shall look back in later years with fond recollections upon the happy hours passed within your portals.

A LETTER

Chem. O., HQ, XI A.F.S.C.
A.P.O. 942, c/o Postmaster,
Seattle, Washington.
February 20, 1943.

Dear Mrs. Slattery:

Please accept my sincere thanks for your gift of books and magazines which were received here yesterday, in excellent shape. You can be sure that they will be doubly appreciated by the officers and men of my section, when I shall have distributed them.

When the men have time on their hands there is nothing they would rather have than a mystery or a detective story to read. Technical books are available here as are also periodicals like "Time," "News Week" and "Life." The men soon tire of these, however, and much prefer the type of books you so kindly sent.

Thanks again,

Sincerely yours,
(Major) John E. Brolles.

Gardenias, resting in my hands
Drenched and trembling 'neath a strange perfume
Filched from Pharaoh's maids in evening gloom
And borne across in triumph from drugged sands
Gardenias, fevered on an icy blaze
Vibrant, living breathing flower-skin
Sprung from a tiny heart that beats within—
You send me reeling in a subtle, gorgeous daze.
Brazen, flaunting your petals all unfurled
Your hands are beckoning and your eyes a-gleam
Would go beyond the bored reality, and dream
Of nights, set free to conquer all the world.
And then, one night a trip to where there lies
In noisy splendor, all the merry throng—
The laughing, loving slaves of Mirth and Song—
When in their living midst you only die.
So it is with me—I want in vain
For one sure glimpse of that, beyond today—
Anxious to be freed, then off, away—
Content to never venture forth again
And like gardenias, I'd like my life to be
Pointed to that peak in my poor span
When gaily I go off, along with Pan
To sample of the cups of Ecstasy.
Give me that glimpse, and I will be
Content to lie among the dust of Memory.

A wave has come
And thundered on the shore
And then walked back again to meet

Though the sun may be burning out there in the distance,
All the chemical changes inside merely bore me.
Though machines may be running with swift-moving pistons
All the wonders that make them no longer can awe me.
I am weary and blue,
There is much I don't like,
There's another thing too,
The bell is on strike.
Although Shakespeare has written such star-climbing drama,
And irregular verbs are most worthy of mention,
There is nothing that interests me, science or grammar,
For here I am serving a wicked detention.

O U T D O O R C O N C E R T

The lights are dim; on boundless wings of melody
A note leaps through the silenced air,
The soft cool tones of midday vanish—
Far west, the sun sinks, and gold streaks linger there.
Oh, to be carried formless through the floating breeze,
Like this sweet music of the hidden haunts—
To dwell forever, silenced, unseen—
To know nothing of earth or her taunts.
But on the waves of cool, celestial sound,
To live eternity, lost to everything
Of feel, or touch, or color—
Alive in throats or hearts that sing.
Formless, like the unseen flight of birds,
Or the soft wind moving through leafy trees,
Reborn forever in warm hearts and throats,
And flowing on, like sweetest melodies.

Pauline Newman

Awake, and hear the summer's first refrain
That throbs in Nature's heart. Behold the flight
Of sun besprinkled wings: the ripening lane
Of petals laughing in the golden light.
And hear the dreamy fountain serenade
The vale. Look well along the leaf crowned bough
That calmly suns its drooping hair, besprayed
By flighty April's ever tearful brow.

With what precision Nature's triumph dawned,
Recall the whitened shroud on fields stripped bare
Of seed, the branches cringing at the taunt
Of winter whistling through the burmal air.
Away with sorrow on a flicker's wing
As through this field of winter steals the spring!

WILL SURVIVE

THE SYMPLEGADES

From: Jason and the Golden Fleece
At Jupiter's command two rocks
As huge as any rocks could be,
Were placed upon the surging waves—
Two mighty perils of the sea.

They formed a monster's gaping mouth,
An eager mouth kept open wide
Just waiting—waiting for some prey
To enter; hope to leave denied.

No choice between the victims made;
Mankind, or bird, or beast was doomed.
Its jagged jaws no mercy knew,
For death o'er every portal loomed.

No voice to say—"Beware! beware!
The floating rocks obstruct your course
To Colchis, east of this Black Sea,
Because a god has used his force."

No means to cross between the rocks;
No help derived from gods through pleas;
For life itself ne'er went beyond
The clutches of Symplegades.
Beryl Hunte

THE OLD STORY

You declare your love in glowing terms,
You swear this time it's real,
You think you'll turn my woman's head
With all your earnest zeal;
You press my hand upon your heart
To hear the mighty beat
With firmest expectations that
You'll sweep me off my feet.
Your technique is terrific and
Your line I just adore
(It's just a shame you've told the same
To thirty-thousand more).
Janette Goldberg

I think that I shall never see
A yearbook picture look like me.
Perhaps, and this I greatly fear,
I'll have a better one next year.
Charles Munoz

A FLEETING MOMENT

Above the ken of brooding thought;
A light appears—a beacon star;
My heart lifts up with joy to greet
This silent stranger from afar.

I hold; I grasp; I pledge to keep;
But like a swallow in its flight,
It preens its wings and soars on high
And flies away beyond my sight.
Beryl Hunte

T O D A N T E

Not Vergil, Livy can compare their fame
To you whose words have sealed the fate of kings;
While pleb and gentle clamor your acclaim,
On Mount Olympus, Zeus your praises sings.
Hell's learned men withstood your mighty wrath
As did the enemies you ne'er forgave;
You hated all who dared to block your path
On earth; in Hell each served you as a slave.
Now love, revealed at last behind dark clouds
Burst forth in glory, casting hate aside;
And Dante, though cool death his love enshrouds,
In heaven, takes fair Beatrice as bride.

Thus love unthreads all earthly strife and pain,
And weaves a fairer justice in her reign.
Irene Gsovski

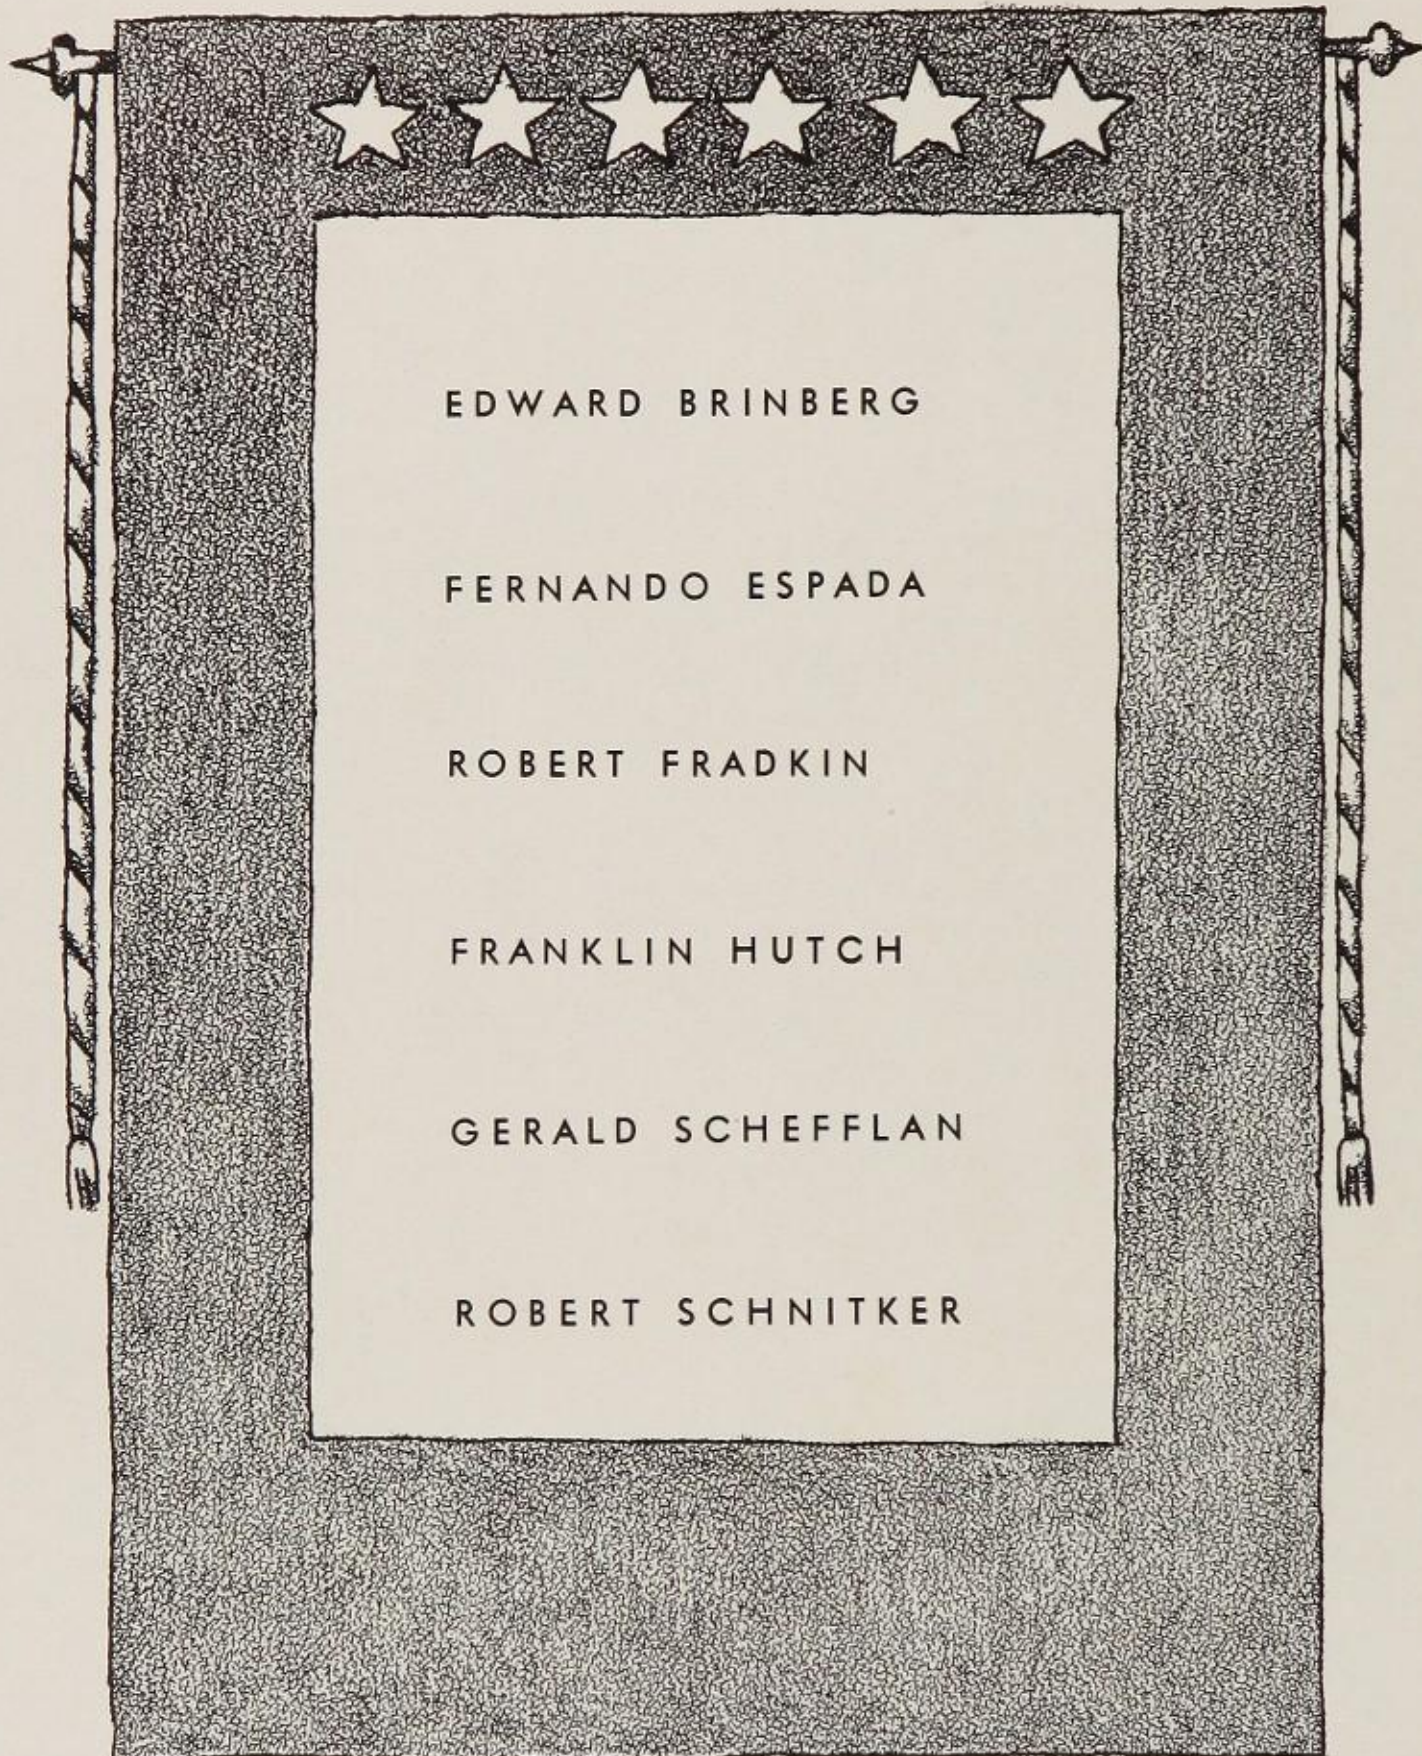

R O M A N C E

When Casanova meets his Henriette
That modern lady grabs a cigarette,
And smiling sweetly at his earnest gaze,
She coyly whispers, "Have you got a blaze?"
Inanely grinning at his lady love,
He reaches for a match within his glove.
She burdens him with bundles, purse and books,
And grabs her compact to adjust her looks.
His heart is pounding with a mighty roar,
As on they wander to the candy store.

OUR SERVICE CLUBS COMMITTEES • SPORTS AFTER SCHOOL ACTIVITIES

Since, at the present time, men are fighting on all fronts, many people wonder why we, the young civilians, still persist in engaging in sports.

When America was brought into this war, the Germans, Italians, and Japanese thought that our men and women were soft. They scoffed at our seemingly lackadaisical system while they were building themselves up in preparation for actual combat. The militaristic nations drilled their youth in the essentials of war while we were playing ball, running and swimming. We enjoyed ourselves; they worked with increasing fervor and seriousness.

We, however, were preparing ourselves, in a pleasant way, to win more than a ball game or swimming meet. Team coordination, affecting the swiftness and precision of the Tunisian victory, was a result of experience acquired from playing football and hockey here in the United States. Crouching in a foxhole, with the dampness penetrating to the very bone, with shells screeching, and bombs falling all around, required great muscular and mental fortitude on the part of our soldiers on Bataan and Guadalcanal. The Fascist fighting men, unskilled in sports, did not have the instincts of combat that can only be used in peacetime in clean games. While engaging in agreeable recreation, American soldiers have learned how to take defeat and come back to win decisive victory.

Now that the war is on, some skeptics still say that we should give up all sports and turn to more serious matters more directly connected with the war effort. We, the youth, and future defenders of our country, however, believe that sports are directly linked with the successful termination of the war. Here at George Washington, before the war, we had gradually relinquished our athletic teams until we had but three left. As soon as the U. S. entered the conflict we began to demand increased athletic participation. We established intramural sports, which while lacking in the lustre of interscholastic activities, allowed more to partake in them. We realized that the essential part of sports was building ourselves up physically and mentally by playing cleanly and hard.

Now, upon leaving High School, we will be more able to serve our country, since we, too, wish to take our places in the armed services or on the home front. We will serve with the confidence that sports have trained us in the rudiments of both teamwork, which is necessary in this great era of mechanization and coordination of power, and individuality, needed in leadership and initiative. We, the future leaders of this nation and the world, should be indeed thankful we live in a country of sportlovers, because, in the long run, the tremendous experience and uplift in morale has made our nation invincible. Sports have been, and shall always be, the foundation for Victory.

WHO'S WHO

J U N E

V V V V V V V V V V V V V V V V V V V

Not very long ago, in preparation for the Regents, our English teachers took us on a tour of the library in order to acquaint us with the library aids. We found out all the information concerning the encyclopedias, the British and American Dictionaries of Biographies, the card catalogue, and "Who's Who in America."

We were all faintly bored by explanations about the last of these. Heavens! Everyone knew it's a biographical dictionary of famous living Americans. The only hope for that book would be the addition of new names.

If we were writing the list, it would include all the names our parents have heard since last February. The book might start as it does now, but the B's would certainly have a new name—Irene Behrens, class of June, '43, first baby to wear heels and lipstick. Under C you'd find John Capsis, Washington's nominee for this year's Oscar, and Bill Crowley, Apollo the Second. Edith Ettman would share with Arista secretary, Miriam Jacobs, the title of Newspaper Woman of the Term. There would be Ricky, (I'd love to call him Dicky, if I dared) Friedenbergs, leader in student government, talented Dotty Persh, and "poet-laureate" Pauline Newman. Miriam Kerans, successor to Bernhardt, Joseph Leo, most popular boy, and Barbara Davies, best-dressed, would have their places. The M's would include Anita Manel, able G.O. secretary, Marilyn McNally (and her address and telephone number), Howard Monderer, leader of the honor society, and Anita Morrissey, senior class secretary and most popular girl. Chris Pappas would be listed for her sweet disposition, John Kelly and Harriet Cohn for their copies of Mona Lisa. Eddie Von Halle, president of the senior class, would no doubt have many paragraphs after his name, the last phrase reading: "One of the ten recipients in the U. S. of the $1,850 scholarship to Carnegie Tech," while Donald Paneth's name would be followed by, "always prepared." Our own Red Wolfe might be dubbed "future Wall Street financier." Of course we can't forget Laurel Greenberg, faculty drag.

There would no doubt be other names: Warnke, our good-looking literary light, AND recipient of a full scholarship to Yale; Milton Smith, athletic wonder of G. W.; versatile Blossom Topor; and Redhead, the man to cheer you when you've got those "income tax blues."

Our "Who's Who" can't be written. We're too unimportant now, but twenty years from this June, our parents will be hearing these names again, not from their children, but from the world.

Ricky (we'd still like to call him Dicky) Friedenbergs may not be the statesman he is now, but a great doctor; John Capsis may be a playwright, not an actor. But whether we turn out the way we've started or not, they'll be hearing of us. Perhaps all of us won't make "Who's Who 1963" but they'll know about us, because, in twenty years, we'll be the influence which will move the world as theirs does now and as we have moved this class to June 23, 1943.

V We

America, the most overworked word in the world today, is most difficult to define. What does this noun mean? What magic charms can it possess, that even its very sound affords renewed hope and courage to people half way around the world? Not the United States of America, not even North America—but just plain America.

America is three thousand miles of land stretching from "sea to shining sea." America is forty-eight sovereign states, held together in one sovereign union. America is battlefields and museums, highways and farms, cities and towns, factories and harbors. America is Grant's Tomb and Constitution Avenue, Yellowstone National Park and the Golden Gate. The Mississippi River and Times Square at Forty-second Street. America is freedom of speech, and press, and religion. America is the "land of the free and the home of the brave."

These facts are all a part of the great whole—but America is not a tangible, concrete term. America is blood and sinew, muscle and backbone. America is courage; courage to fight, and courage to win. America is the Americans living within its borders. America is the eleven hundred George Washington High School graduates of 1943, in whose honor this year book has been published.

Do we graduates deserve this distinguished title of Americans. Most of us are too young to muster rifles and launch ships, but not too young to know what is right and what is wrong. We know that "democracy must never perish from this earth," and armed with this knowledge, we have done all that our country has asked of us, and then tried to do more.

We are Junior Civilian Defense Workers. We have collected scrap and salvage of all sorts, and we volunteered during rationing week. We have sent books and magazines to our soldiers, sailors, and marines. We have knitted afghans, sweaters, and "beanies" for the Red Cross, and we have purchased war stamps and bonds to help defeat the Axis. But perhaps what is most important, is that we have derived the greatest benefit possible from our education in George Washington High School.

The years to come will be years of great promise for America and the human race. They will be years of fire and steel, of mighty clashes on land, sea, and in the air. But in the flame and heat of these years, the eleven hundred George Washington High School graduates of 1943, and all their fellow-graduates throughout these United States, will forge the future brotherhood of man under the fatherhood of God.

AS TIME GOES BY

Some years ago a catchy little tune swept the country and like most popular song hits, sold a million copies and then was forgotten, for a while at least. This particular hit was revived just a few months ago, and sold another million copies, because in addition to being a catchy little tune, it expressed a sentiment that is so timely now. The lyrics proclaim, "A kiss is still a kiss; a sigh is still a sigh; the fundamental things apply, as time goes by."

That thought is a comfort—especially to people like us, who have known peace and freedom, and brotherhood and love, and have worked and played,—and prayed,—and have done so without fear. It is a comfort to know that Dad did, and that there will be proms, and parties, and dates, and kids will have fun, as they should have. They weren't meant to grow up like Hitler's children — regimented little puppets dancing on strings controlled by a madman.

What wonderful memories we have, what comfortable memories. Dad has them, too, and his dad. That's America. That's what we're fighting for. We've got to keep those fundamental things.

The United States entered the war when we budding young alumni were at the half-way mark. We had just reached the stage where we could cope somewhat with our adolescence. Previously, if we must admit it ourselves, we were rather ridiculous. Remember how proud we were to become high school students? How we boasted to the kids on the block, only to have our egos deflated by the upper classmen at school? Remember our first experiences with lipstick, or razor blades—those first surreptitious applications we thought Mother and Dad would never detect? And our outlandish outfits—sweater girls we were—"Sloppy Joes"—sloppy being more than just a trade name. And pegged pants. If they are out for the duration, we must admit the war is accomplishing one more useful purpose. And then there were those crushes—movie actors and actresses suddenly became heroes—and heroines. The boys were not at all immune.

There were gym classes where little elephants danced to "SWANEE RIVER," and we had a baseball team then. There were G.O. dances and bi-weekly "CHERRY TREES," and we were growing up. A "degenerate" nation? What does Hitler say: "incompetents," an "inferior race?"

Well, two years later we stood the test. In our sweaters and pegged pants we organized salvage drives, and joined victory clubs, and knitted for the Red Cross, donated blood, sold stamps and bonds—and bought them—took defense courses, studied nutrition, First Aid, enlisted in the armed services. Quite remarkable for undisciplined youngsters, don't you think? And still we enjoyed all the wonderful privileges of being American children. We had elections at school—democratic elections—and senior assemblies. Remember how late our class pins arrived and how concerned we were about them? And then there was senior week. We pretended we never heard that the shortest distance between two points is a straight line. We HAD to use the marble staircase anyway. And those hats. We'd have slept in them if it were possible. And all those elaborate plans for the prom. At first we didn't think we'd have one because of conditions. It seemed a small sacrifice to make, but we found we could have it, without disturbing our consciences. That's one of the most wonderful privileges of being an American—having a conscience, having a sense of fair play, cooperating, loving, sharing, trusting—those fundamental things.

It seems presumptuous for a group of very young men and women on their commencement day—not graduation, but commencement, to dictate a mode of conduct to dictators. But American children are going to lead the way. They've got to. It's got to be American children with open hearts, and open minds, and liberal educations, who will pave the way for the world of tomorrow, the better world—so that the fundamental things may apply, always, as time goes by.

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT

We, the graduating class of June, 1943, being of sound mind and memory, and mindful of the uncertainties of undergraduate life, do hereby make, publish, declare, and proclaim this to be our last will and testament; hereby revoking all former wills heretoforth contemplated or made.

In grateful recognition of the services of the administrative staff, we hereby direct our executors to pay all our just debts, especially our debt of gratitude, as soon after our graduation as is practicable.

Being fully aware of the duties imposed upon the long-suffering graduates' office, we do give, devise, and bequeath one sigh of relief to same, to be used judiciously until the arrival of our successors.

To that Mecca of unfulfilled hope and last refuge of the cutters, the girl's medical room, we give one good excuse to be used with care and discretion until better brains than ours invent a brighter idea.

With the naïve wish that it may assist materially in the carrying out of their assigned duties, we give to the late and cut offices an alarm clock and scissors, on the condition that these goods, being on a priority rating, be given an occasional rest.

Realizing fully the importance of news to students in the public high schools, we give to the Cherry Tree, and all future editors thereof, and reporters and apprentices therein, one set of well-sharpened blue pencils. We attach no condition to this bequest, realizing fully that our designated heirs know only too well how to use them.

To the Judicial Board, those erstwhile guardians of student deportment, we leave one cup of the milk of human kindness.

To the members of Arista, who have been suffering under the humiliation of wearing ersatz pins, we give new metal pins and new metal forks to the lunch room staff. These goods shall be released when the death of one Adolph Hitler becomes known to the world at large.

To the grade advisers' office, we give one large wooden bucket to collect all the tears shed over changes in program.

To the students in the lunch room, we give a supply of voice lozenges, to ease their throbbing, overworked vocal chords.

We leave a stop watch to those members of the English Department who so consistently stress brevity.

After four-odd years of constant compression and expansion in the elevators of the I.R.T. station, we bequeath to the undergraduate students of George Washington H.S. all the limited space that we have heretofore occupied therein.

To the Chemistry Lab—without comment, we leave six bottles of Chanel Number 5.

To the War Service Club, which has done much to save our very young generation from the trials and tribulations of shoe rationing, we leave three reconditioned Stetsons.

To the members of the Program Committee, faculty and students alike, who swelter in the summer heat and freeze in the winter cold to complete the vital job of obliging the student body with rather unique programs, we bequeath a sub-machine gun and one hundred rounds of ammunition to defend themselves against the wrath of the delighted recipients.

To the swimming clubs, which are responsible for uncovering the hitherto latent talents of G.W.'s Johnny Weissmullers and Gertrude Ederles, we leave four pairs of retreated water-wings.

To the Modern Literature Club, which has been the guiding light for the high standards maintained by the well-read students of our school, we leave twelve pairs of spectacles.

To the Biology Clubs—whose frequent hikes have resulted in moving pictures which taught us to appreciate nature, we leave a bicycle and a bottle of liniment.

To the Music Department from whose portals emanates the squeaky sound of violins, the blasting of trombones, etc., we leave a pair of earmuffs.

To the Study Hall we leave four Kleig lights.

To the gym locker rooms, we bequeath a badly needed air conditioning system.

To the Steno Office, we bequeath one C.P.A. to take charge of refunds on lost books.

To the Freshman class, which has ahead of it the very confusing journey on the road through high school, we leave a road map.

To the Sophomore class, which has already endured one full year of training, we leave a star of hope that they may go blissfully on their way to attaining that distant goal—Senior class.

To the Junior class, which has passed the halfway mark in its school career, we leave "See Here, Private Hargrove" as a substitute for "Burke's Speech on Conciliation."

To the new Senior class, we leave a medal for gaining its objective and a Trust Fund to pay all the senior expenses.

All the rest, residue, and remainder we leave to the faculty adviser of the Mathematics Club. "That's all there is, there isn't anymore."

It witness whereof we have hereunto set our hands and affixed our seals on this 30th day of June, 1943.

signed:—
